9AM Prayer Meeting

Now that Elijah Kingsley Gallagher has been born into this world, it's hard to imagine life without him. Jess and I can sit on the couch, with nothing going on around, no movie or tv show turned on, doing absolutely nothing but staring into his eyes and smiling and laughing about how cute his expressions are. Then come the night times when we are awoken by a baby crying, asking for a feed or his nappy to be changed, and while at first, we may not want to get up, once we look into his eyes, and are holding him in our arms, the frustration seems to fade away.

This got me thinking about our relationship with Jesus. You see God gave up His one and only Son so that we could have a relationship with Him so that we could fall in love with Him. All the things we use to be consumed by fade into the background and we are completely consumed by His love for us and our love for Him. And yet I wonder how true that is for us.

I don't know about you, but I find it difficult to want to turn off everything, and simply just bask in the glory of God's presence. When all my frustration builds up, I know (in my head) that God is there for me, and yet I let earthly things try to give me comfort. We say that God is our first love, and the Bible says He should be, and yet as David preached last week, He often comes last on the ladder of importance in our lives. Oh, how I long to stare at God and be content to just sit in His presence. If this rings true for you, may you begin to prioritise God, to cry out to Him day and night. I pray that the Holy Spirit may come and change our hearts.

God bless, Pastor Harrison
